Pitch:

- I work with computers often.

- I also play video games socially with my friends.

- We have a podcast in which we talk about a variety of topics in video games or current events.

- We need a way to advertise our content so that we can get a bigger audience which would help our content become more relevant to the internet. There are millions of different podcasts out there and having a website that would act as a central hub for our content would allow new listeners to find our content easier.

- Think about a business' website. Have you ever opened a web page for a company and not stuck around to purchase their product, because their website stunk? In a business model, you need a website that looks good; so, too, with anyone who wants people to find their content. I will build our podcast website.

Feedback:

- I need to talk slower and breathe.

- The pitch is straight-forward and my intentions are clear.

- Smile more!

- The "bad web page idea" was a great example of hooking someone.
